British Immigration.

To the editor of the Norfolk Virginian, Sir: Having resided in Australia, New Zea-land, New York, Minnesota, Nebraska, and other Western States, I have no hesitation in recommending this State as the best place I know for Euglishmen of moderate means to locate in. There are thousands of farmers and the younger sons of country gentlemen who would thrive in this State. To reach these classes, no system of government immigration agency will suffice. What we want is to combine our English settlers and let their practical experience be known. For this purpose the proposed celebration of Queen Victoria's birthday in Richmond will be a great event-great in its importance to the settlers, but far greater in its event to the dear old home of our adop-

We all desire to meet and become acquainted with our fellow-settlers, and if anything will bring Englishmen together, the birthday of our noble Queen will. We ask the press of Virginia, so kind and generous in its treatment of Englishmen, to help us to make it known everywhere in the State, so that none may be absent because of Ignorance. Every British settler is invited, and all ought to come.

Yours respectfully. THOS JONES BEBB. Hon. See'y of the British Com., Chase City. Jan. 21st, 1874.

A COSTLY SONGSTER. -The following execution, issued yesterday, shows that litigation is not one of the least expensive luxuries that can be indulged in:

Mary Alice Hill was possessed of a mocking-bird, which she valued at $10, although the feathery songster was afterward appraised only at half that amount. By some means "birdie" escaped, and she finding it in possession, as she thought, of Catharine and Eliza Hollahan, she thought, of Catharine and Eliza Hollahan, took out a writ of replevin before Justice Webster, which resulted in her procuring the bird after giving security in the person of L. J. Miller. When the replevin came to trial, she was beaten, whereupon she took an appeal to court, retaining possession of the bird. Here she failed to put in an appearance, either personally or by counsel, and the judgment below being affirmed, an execution was issued yester day for the return of the bird to the Hollohans and for the recovery of the court fees, which and for the recovery of the court fees, which alone amounted to $16 15, independent of expenses incurred in the Justice's court below .-Washington Chronicle.
